NEWS BRIEFS

Duty Status Check

Airmen who take weekend trips, go on temporary duty leave for work or TDY for medical appointments are required to first sign out at their commander's support staff. Since senior leadership needs to know the duty status of their Airmen at all times, it's important to sign out. For more informations regarding policy, visit your orderly room.

Interrogators Needed

Airmen from any Air Force speciality code can volunteer to become an interrogator in support of Task Force 134 in Iraq. More than 95 Airmen are needed from functional expertises and 45 from non-specific AFSCs. Only Airmen with top secret security clearances are eligible to volunteer for this duty. Once the screenig and hiring process has been finalized, Air Force Personnel Center will post AFSC generic Equal Plus ads online to solicit volunteers. The current goal is to identify all required volunteers by March 25. If enough voluneers are not aquired, a non-volunteer process using short tour selection criteria will be implemented.

Kunsan City Running Event

Kunsan City will host a 5K, 10K and half marathon run April 17 beginning at 10.a.m. The fee is 10,000 Won for the 5 K race and 25,000 for the 10K and half marathon. Wolf Pack members should register with Capt. Pamela Novy by 5 p.m. today. Members must pay the entry fee at the time of registration.

Inspectors see it all

By Master Sgt. R.C. Pinder
Exercise Evaluation Team

The operational readiness inspection is only a few weeks away, and Wolf Pack members need to start using their work days sensibly to demonstrate to the inspector general just how superior the Wolf Pack really is.

Your exercise evaluation team can provide you with the most current information on recent ORI trends, hints and best practices. If you have questions, feel free to ask. If they cannot answer your questions directly, they will get you the answer. If your question will help the entire base, you could see it again, perhaps even in the base newspaper.

What are some of the things the IG will look at? For starters, the IG team will check everything. Every unit can expect a functional expert to look over their shoulders, in their files, at their programs and then document their findings good or bad.

Wolf Pack members should expect to see numerous exercise scenarios and responses evaluated by the IG. Some things they will look at include major accident response exercises, force protection and information condition changes, resource protection threats, aircraft incidents and structure fires.

The best thing you can do to make an outstanding score is work hard. Do your daily routine like you have been. Don't do or say something unusual, dangerous or different. If you have a better way of doing things, show it off but don't try something new as the IG team walks into your work area just to try and impress them.

Look at previous reports, write-ups and summaries. Don't allow the same finding to happen again. Use the IG's checklists to inspect yourself.

Here are a few past observations:

You won't be baffle the team with nonsense. You only have one chance to make a first impression. Believe me, it includes more than just dress and appearance, weight standards, customs and courtesies and 100 percent seat belt use. The inspectors will check and crosscheck all documentation to ensure you have proof you're complying with instructions.

The IG team will also evaluate Kunsan's response to every scenario. While the exercise is unfolding and Wolf Pack people drive or walk by the area, apparently unmindful to what is developing around them, you can rest assured the inspectors will notice, and the results will not be noteworthy.

Remember, once the IG team arrives, there will be no such thing as an exercise that doesn't affect every member of the Wolf Pack team.

Could you make Lombardi's team?

SOUTHWEST ASIA — "I firmly believe that any man's finest hour, the greatest fulfillment of all that he holds dear, is the moment when he has worked his heart out in a good cause and lies exhausted on the field of battle — victorious."

This quote doesn't belong to George Patton or Curtis LeMay, but to one of the most successful football coaches of all time, Vince Lombardi.

He took one of the least successful teams of its time, the Green Bay Packers, and made them successful.

We can apply this great coach's principles to our daily military lives to both motivate and measure our commitment to our task.

♦Intensity: "You never win a game unless you beat the guy in front of you.

It doesn't matter how well you did the task the day before, what matters is doing that task now — the task at hand.

♦Sacrifice: "Success is like anything worthwhile. It has a price."

Nobody gave us the status of the world's greatest military machine. It's through unwavering conviction of character and commitment to our cause that we remain a world power.

♦Discipline: "Teams do not go physically flat, they go mentally stale."

In some cases, if we go 'mentally stale' for a single moment, people may die. Mental toughness is paramount to our success.

♦Leadership: "Leadership rests not only upon ability, not only upon capacity; having the capacity to lead is not enough. The leader must be willing to use it.

His leadership is then based on truth and character. There must be truth in the purpose and will power in the character."

Step up to make the tough call when it's unpopular. Have the integrity and initiative to step ahead of your peers to make the difference, no matter what.

Vince Lombardi's ideals and character would have served amongst the greatest of generals. Although he chose football instead of a military career, his standards transcend one profession and apply to all of us in our endeavors to defeat an enemy.

I challenge you to play on Coach Lombardi's team.

Dear Wolf Pack,

On behalf of Shinkwang Mother and Children's Shelter, I appreciate you very much for supporting the shelter holiday party on Dec. 21, 2004. Thanks for your generous donation of money, time, cooking and volunteering. As a result of your help, 160 were fed and 100 children received Christmas gifts.

Although our people we not able to communicate well with you during the party, they could feel the warm welcoming atmosphere as they exchanged smiles with you. Now that they know 'the joy of receiving', they surely will want to feel and learn 'the joy of giving' when they leave the shelter and go back into society.

Our shelter currently serves 53 low income single mother families with free housing and various social welfare services. As they suffer from serious illness and financial difficulty, our mission is to help them stay intact and rehabilitate as a healthy family. Our efforts would not have been successful, if you had not been there to help us.

Again, your loving support is greatly appreciated. May God bless your.

Sincerely yours,

Meesook Kim

Travel card info lost

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON— About 900,000 Defense Department employees, including some stationed at Kunsan, have been affected by Bank of America's loss of government travel card information, Pentagon officials said recently.

The General Services Administration and Bank of America notified DoD that GSA 'SmartPay' travel cards are affected.

Officials said Bank of America has been monitoring the affected accounts, and there is no evidence of fraud or misuse of the accounts.

Bank of America has sent letters to affected employees.

"Information regarding travel card program accounts for individual card holders has been lost, and it is possible that information has been compromised, though we don't believe that it is the case," said Teresa McKay, the Defense Department's deputy chief financial officer.

According to 8th Comptroller Squadron officials, Wolf Pack members affected by the lost data have received notification via email of their status.

The U.S. Secret Service is conducting the investigation, with help from the Defense Criminal Investigative Service. Officials said although there has been no evidence of criminal activity, release of details on the circumstances of the loss could jeopardize the investigation.

"Indications right now are that it is an accidental event," Ms. McKay said. "The bank has been monitoring the accounts involved from the onset, and to date there has been no indication of fraudulent activity."

The information is personal cardholder information — names, Social Security numbers, addresses and account numbers — on magnetic tape. The loss occurred in late December. GSA notified DoD on Jan. 19. Mrs. McKay said the delay was necessary to protect the integrity of the investigation.

"The bank is in the process of notifying cardholders of the situation," she added. "They will be given a special customer service number that has been set up by the bank specifically for this purpose. If (cardholders) have any questions, they can contact the bank. If they would like, they may request that the bank cancel the card and reissue a card to them."

Ms. McKay added consumers should always keep an eye on any credit accounts they have.

"It's always prudent for any cardholder to monitor their monthly statements (and) dispute any charges they may question."

"It's important for all of us to get a credit report at least once a year and look at the content of that report," she added.

Bank of America has set up a hotline for those affected. The number is (800) 493-8444. Cardholders who notice irregularities in their accounts should call the Bank of America at the 800 number printed on the back of their cards, Ms. McKay said.

"If you are an affected cardholder, you may contact Bank of America for information on obtaining a free credit report," she added.

Good security practices could stop credit fraud

With personal information constantly zipping across cyber space, Airmen here can protect themselves from identity theft by securing their own personal information as best they can.

The following suggestions can help members protect their financial and personal information.

- ♦ Be discriminating when providing personal information such as Social Security numbers and account or credit card information over the telephone, in person or on the Internet. Don't give this information unless you're sure of the person you're dealing with.
- ♦ Protect the Social Security numbers of yourself, your spouse and children by not carrying them in your wallet.
- ♦ Report lost or stolen checks, credit or debit cards immediately. Bank of America will block payment on check numbers or account numbers involved.
- ♦ Store cancelled checks, new checks and account statements in a safe place.
- ♦ Notify your bank of suspicious phone inquiries such as those asking for account information to 'verify a statement' or 'award a prize'.
- ♦ Memorize your personal identification number, or PIN. Refrain from writing it your Social Security number or credit card number on a check.
- ♦ Tear up or shred any pre-approved credit offers you don't respond to. Thieves can use these offers to assume your identity.
- ♦ Keep mail secure.

Don't mail bills or sensitive information from your home or unsecured mailboxes. Retrieve and review your mail promptly. Thieves may use the personal information contained in your mail to steal your identity.

- ♦ If you don't receive your regular bills when expected, call the company to find out why.

- ♦ Review your monthly account statements thoroughly. Investigate suspicious items immediately to head off any possible fraud before it occurs.

- ♦ Don't carry your Social Security card, passport or birth certificate unless needed that day.

- ♦ Beware of fraudulent e-mail messages asking for account and personal information to 'reactivate' or 'verify' your accounts. Don't give out this information unless you are sure of the person whom you're dealing with.

- ♦ Review your credit report at least once every year. Make sure all information is up to date and accurate. If you think you've been a victim of identity theft, the three major credit bureaus have resources dedicated to help you.

AFAF answers sergeant's call for help 3 times in 6 months

By Sue Waldon
45th Space Wing Public Affairs

PATRICK AFB, Fla.—Tech. Sgt. Thad Henderson likes to say he's the poster child for the Air Force Assistance Fund.

Tragedy struck his family not once, but three times in six months in 2004. He credits a good portion of his stamina to the AFAF and the caring of the 45th Space Wing's Family Support Center staff.

"In June, my wife's father called and said he and his brother were in the hospital and that his brother wasn't expected to live," said Sergeant Henderson, the 45th Logistics Readiness Flight transient operations manager. The brothers were ailing from heart problems.

With the financial help of AFAF, Sergeant Henderson's wife, Trish, and 13-year-old daughter, Brittane, hopped on the next plane to Illinois. Sergeant Henderson and their son, Brandan, 16, followed the next day.

For more information on donating to the Air Force Assistance Fund, contact Maj. Jonathan Arnett at 782-7182.

"We were so grateful to get the funds so quickly because my wife arrived at the hospital one hour before her Uncle Leo died. Fortunately, her dad pulled through," he said.

Unfortunately, the Hendersons weren't out of the woods yet. They received a Red Cross message in October that Trish's father was again seriously ill and in the hospital.

"The Air Force Aid Society fronted us the money to get back to Illinois," he said. The family jumped in the car and headed to Illinois, stopping at a Western Union in Georgia to get the AFAS money that would cover food, hotel, travel and incidentals.

Trish's father pulled through again. But on Dec. 16, the worst thing that could happen to a family happened to the Hendersons.

Trish was feeling tired, laid on the couch and passed away from a heart ailment.

Sgt. Henderson was understandably stricken with grief and shock.

"You can't think of what you have to do next, but I called the Family Support Center and they made everything so much smoother," he said.

Sal Noto and Chrissy DeWitte, Family Support Center community readiness consultants, arranged a $5,267 bridge loan from AFAS to cover funeral expenses until SGLI insurance came through. The money was in Sergeant Henderson's hands within 24 hours.

"I'm glad we were there to help the Hendersons during their times of need," said Mr. Noto. "AFAF is definitely there in any emergency."

Now Sergeant Henderson is on a campaign to let everyone know the benefits of contributing to AFAF. He's started with telling members of his flight about how AFAF helped his family.

Though most people aren't exactly eager to pay back a loan, Sergeant Henderson is.

"I want to settle up with AFAS; I want to repay them so others can get home when they need it," he said. "Their help has been priceless to my family and me."

The Air Force Assistance Fund provides support through four Air Force charities: the Air Force Aid Society, the Air Force Enlisted Foundation Inc., the Air Force Village Indigent Widow's Fund, and the General and Mrs. Curtis E. LeMay Foundation people can make one-time payroll deduction donations to these organizations.

Air Force officials project budget shortfall

By Master Sgt. David Byron
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON — Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John Jumper directed all major commands to cut back on low priority spending in an attempt to stave off a budget crisis.

Supporting the war on terrorism and ongoing operations around the world created a projected budget shortfall, forcing the Air Force to tighten its belt.

“We expect to be $733 million short in military personnel funding,” General Jumper said in a message to major command commanders. “Based on our current burn rates, we project a $3 billion shortfall in our (operations and maintenance) funds by the end of the year.”

The unexpected debt can be largely attributed to war-on-terrorism expenses, officials said.

The fiscal 2005 supplemental funding bill is currently working its way through Congress.

“We’re faced with some uncertainty because congressional action still lies ahead and may not be completed until April,” the general said. “We will have to realign some funding to ensure all commands are solvent while we await the supplemental bill’s enactment.”

Although it will affect modernization efforts, funds will be re-programmed as a partial solution. The general identified the top two funding priorities.

“We must continue to support requirements of the global war on terrorism and ongoing operations in the theater,” General Jumper said. “We must also protect efforts supporting the next rotation to those operations.”

While readiness and combat training, including flying hours, will remain a high priority, the general has directed slowing those activities if it is clearly necessary to meet the top two priorities.

Some areas will be hit harder.

“Facilities, business operations, travel, administrative functions, nondeployment-related training and new contracts rank as lower priorities,”

“We will do all we can to find more funding. But, we have to cover the military personnel bill and ongoing war effort first.”

—General John Jumper
Air Force chief of staff

he said. “These areas should be slowed significantly through the end of the fiscal year.”

Air Force and MAJCOM leaders are currently building detailed plans to keep the O&M account solvent through Sept. 30 using available funding, and most MAJCOMs have already begun changing their spending priorities.

For example, Air Force Space Command officials delayed some key programs, and limited contract awards, facility projects, travel expenses, equipment purchases and supply requirements not directly tied to the ongoing war effort, officials said.

Despite the cuts, AFSPC officials have said they remain committed to focusing their remaining funds on maintaining space superiority, providing desired combat effects to the joint warfighter, and maintaining strategic deterrence.

Air Mobility Command officials also cut back on travel, supply and equipment purchases that don’t affect current combat operations, officials said. They have also limited facility projects to emergency work only and slowed planned technology upgrades.

Mobility flying operations, required depot maintenance and all war-related activities will not be affected, AMC officials said.

Air Force Reserve Command and the Air National Guard will not immediately be affected. Their appropriation funding bill is separate from the active-duty system.

“We will do all we can to find more funding,” General Jumper said. “But, we have to cover the military personnel bill and ongoing war effort first.”

“I’m asking that all Airmen give this their personal attention and carefully consider whether each dollar spent is spent wisely.”

Airman convicted for theft

By Staff Sgt. Michelle Palmer
8th Fighter Wing Legal Office

A military jury sentenced an Airman with the 8th Security Forces Squadron to three months confinement and reduced him in rank to airman basic during a recent court martial held here.

Airman Robert Dixie Jr. was also ordered to forfeit $823 pay per month for three months and given a bad conduct discharge after he was convicted of larceny and unlawful entry.

According to testimony presented during the two-day special court-martial, the Airman stole personal property and room keys from individuals in a base dormitory.

Contrary to the Airman’s pleas of no wrongdoing, a panel of officers and enlisted members found the airman unlawfully entered dormitory rooms and wrongfully took items from several residents.

Seven Wolf Pack master sergeants earn extra stripe

Kunsan Airmen among group of more than 1500 out of 16,708 who tested

The Air Force selected the following Wolf Pack senior noncommissioned officers for promotion to senior master sergeant Thursday:

Tammy Brangard-Hern, 8th Mission Support Squadron

Rhonda Britt, 8th MSS

Sean Billett, 8th Operations Support Squadron

Jesus Longoria, Jr., 8th Civil Engineer Squadron

Lewis Sutton, 8th Medical Operation Squadron

Hector Gonzalez-Pastrana, 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron

Steven Powell, 8th AMXS

Michael Wilber, 8th Maintenance Squadron

Air Force officials selected 1,535 out of 16,708 eligible master sergeants for promotion – a 9.19 percent selection rate.

The average score for those selected was 663.46 with an average time in grade and time in service of 4.54 and 20.16 years respectively.

PRIDE OF THE PACK

Senior Airman Jolleen Alexander

Unit: 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron
Duties: F-16 crew chief
Hometown: Susanville, Calif.
Follow-on: Edwards Air Force Base, Calif
Hobbies: Playing softball, cards and reading
Favorite music: Alternative
Last good movie: The Notebook
Best thing you’ve done here: ‘Being open minded to the Korean culture and food.’

“Senior Airman Alexander has been stationed at Kunsan for three months. During this time she has been the assistant dedicated crew chief on the F-16C 88-0515 aircraft. Her maintenance skills are evident by the superb 85.1 percent fully mission-capable rate on her aircraft since her arrival. Furthermore, 88-0515 has flown an impressive 85 sorties, 74 of which were rated ‘code 1.’ Her keen eye and attention to detail prevented her aircraft from being impounded, and she saved numerous maintenance man-hours when she discovered a missing cockpit warning light and retrieved it. Additionally she discovered a cut main landing gear tire during a local exercise. She removed and replaced the tire and saved the scheduled sortie. Airman Alexander excels in her additional duty as the travel pod program manager and has contributed substantially to the Tsunami Relief Fund.”

Barrier breakers —

Women's History Month honors great women who served

While a lieutenant in the spring of 1975, flight nurse Regina Aune became the first and only woman to receive the Cheney Award, which recognizes acts of valor 'in a humanitarian interest performed in connection with aircraft.' She did it saving orphans during Operation Babylift.

The doors already began to open when the Women Airforce Service Pilot came along in 1942. They were among the first female pilots in the military. These four female pilots were trained to fly at the four engine school in Lockbourne, Texas. They were members of a group of WASPs who were trained to ferry the B-17 Flying Fortresses.

Jacqueline Cochran was the first woman aviator to break the sound barrier and a leading aviatrix. She promoted an independent Air Force and was the director of women's flying training for the Women's Air Force Service Pilots program during World War II. She held more speed, altitude and distance records than any other male or female pilot in aviation history at the time of her death, Aug. 10, 1980.

ABOVE: Nancy Batson was one of the first women to fly the Republican P-47 Thunderbolt after only three weeks in training. She graduated from Women Airforce Service Pilot training in 1944 and eventually accumulated more than 900 hours of flying time in more than 25 different types of aircraft. Although the WASP was deactivated shortly after she graduated, Mrs. Batson continued to fly commercial planes for years afterward. She eventually became the mayor of California City, Calif.

RIGHT: Major General Marcelite Harris commissioned through Officer Training School, Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, in 1965. She has held a variety of assignments, many of which resulted in 'firsts' for women in the Air Force. She was the first woman aircraft maintenance officer, one of the first two women air officers commanding at the U.S. Air Force Academy, and the first woman deputy commander for maintenance. She also served as a White House social aide during the Carter administration.

In 1993 Col. Susan Helms was the first U.S. military woman in space. She then went on to become the first woman to inhabit the International Space Station in 2001, and holds the world record, along with crewmate Army Col. Jim Voss, for the longest space walk of eight hours and 56 minutes, also in 2001.

Champs: 8th Civil Engineer Squadron ballers sweep through loser's brackets to take basketball titles

Congratulations to both the 8th Civil Engineer Squadron's intramural and Over-30 basketball teams for winning the 2004/2005 base intramural championship titles. Both squads took the long road to the crown by working through the loser's bracket on their way to the championship. Once in the championship game, both teams were forced to win two-straight to be crowned the "Kings of the Court."

Information provided by the fitness center

The 8th CES over-30 team took the over-30 crown March 4 to complete the sweep. Both squads had to 'survive and advance' through the loser's bracket to reach each respective championship game. RIGHT: Stevie Purnell, 8th Communications Squadron, pulls up for a baseline jumper during the intramural championship game March 3 at the fitness center. Comm cruised through the tournament before stumbling and dropping two straight games to the Red Devils from the 8th CES.
